

Have you been working and tested positive for COVID-19?

- You will be entitled to support equal to your net salary, for a maximum period of 28 days.
- Disease status information is sent electronically by the Health Services to Social Security.

Have you been working and have been in contact with a positive case and did the Health Authority determine Isolation?

- You will be entitled to support equal to your net salary, for a maximum period of 14 days.

What to do?

The worker sends to the employer a declaration of prophylactic isolation.

The company sends through the Social Security Direct (SSD) at www.seg-social.pt the form GIT-71-DGSS and the declaration of isolation issued by the Health Authority.

If a prophylactic isolation declaration has been issued by the SNS24 line, the company communicates by inserting the validation code on the SSD.
